About this Learning Opportunity

When I was a child in elementary school there wasn't such a thing as ADHD, but I definitely struggled with it. I was officially diagnosed in my fifties. I always thought I was dumb until I ended up in education. As a teacher for the past 34 years, I've always tried to teach the way I like to learn: with activities that are high interest, fun, active and engaging. Come learn tips and strategies for engaging those learners who learn best by doing. Actually, these ideas help all learners.

About the Facilitator(s)

Danny Bateman

Danny is currently an instructor of pre-service teachers at Concordia University of Edmonton. As an experienced and esteemed public speaker, he delivers teaching strategies and inspiration using entertaining experiences and actionable content. He has delivered hundreds of successful sessions for teachers. His expertise comes from working in public education for 35 years, in six different schools, as an inclusive education teacher and behaviour consultant. Many have described him as a “dynamic, engaging, and entertaining presenter”.

This learning opportunity is being subsidized through funding from Alberta Education.
